And now commenced a race for Trenton. The Life of Washington is therefore an account of men and events by one who saw much at first hand and saw with a knowing eye.

Lancaster, Bruce; Plumb, John H. Harless, Richard By the Revolutionary War, he had all his slaves inoculated for smallpox. Fitzpatrick, John, ed. These could not arrive during the drought existing at that time, because the river Le Boeuf, on which their supplies must be brought to Virginia, was too low for the purpose. As a respected military hero and landowner, he held local office and was elected to the Virginia provincial legislature, representing Frederick County in the House of Burgesses for seven years beginning in
