Background The Ingram Street Tea Rooms were some of the first dining establishments created by Catherine Cranston at the end of the nineteenth century Tea at Miss Cranstons Glasgow. It featured a sumptuous colour scheme of grey, purple and white, featuring a soft grey carpet, a silk upholstered dadochairs and settees upholstered in a rich rose-purple, and silver painted tables with high-backed chairs. The domestic-style leaded glass announced the intimacy of the interior and hinted at the luxurious willow theme to be found inside.
